

Imprisonment for Debt.—The history of the ancient governments furnish abundant authority that civil liberty has been more than once endangered by the discretionary and uncontrolled power vested in the creditor over the person of the debtor. And that the lawgivers of old, foreseeing the tendency of this power to anarchy and confusion, interposed some salutary checks for the safety of the State. It is argued by the advocates of this anomalous, barbarous system, that it is entitled to our veneration by reason of its antiquity. The argument proves too much. We have carried our veneration too far already. We have adopted many imperfections and absurdities of the English common law, without consulting the spirit and genius of our republican form of government. Notwithstanding the inconveniences and defects which time has engendered, we cling with the most stubborn tenacity to the musty lore of the parent jurisprudence, forgetful that it is the genius of that government, apparently combining so many incongruous advantages, to keep in reverential awe her antiquated, time-worn customs. The antiquities and traditional relics of jurisprudence have no higher claim to our reverence and respect, than as they are consistent with common sense; of no farther utility than to amuse the speculator or gratify the curiosity of the legal antiquarian. Touch not this ancient law. It had its origin in remote antiquity. It has a prescriptive right in our statute-book. So say the advocates of imprisonment of the innocent. With equal reason are all the relics of past ages and superstitions, brutal barbarism, entitled to our profound veneration. As well might we adopt all the absurd and exploded doctrines of the Feudal system; a system which derived its origin from the Northern or Celtic nations, and was received throughout the continent of Europe upwards of twelve centuries ago. The same argument may be urged with equal force, in favor of the ancient methods of trial and conviction of offenders. The trial by fire or water ordeal, by the corse or morsel of exorcism, by the veger of battle, relics of ignorance and barbarity, the offspring of credulity and superstition, alike consecrated by hoary antiquity. The veger of law is another of the precious remains of the good old times. It is a defence which we believe, may at this day, in England, be set up in answer to an action of detinue or debt on simple contract. In its operation it is certainly more humane, and not less absurd, than our law of imprisonment. This defence, undoubtedly, occasions a departure from "nice extremes" in swearing, but perhaps not greater than in the proceedings under our poor debtor system. When this plea is pleaded, (says that great luminary of the law, Mr Brougham) the defendant has only to swear that he does not owe the sum of money claimed by the plaintiff, and bring eleven others to swear that they believe him; and a defendant would certainly be bad off, if he could not find so many persons to do this kind office for him, as he needs only to bring those who know him, but know nothing of the circumstances; for the less they know, the more ready will they be to swear they believe their friend. He has only to place them on opposite sides at the end of a table, (for the wisdom of past ages hath carefully fixed the stations which they are to occupy pending the solemnity,) get them to swear, and there is an end at once to the action. Such are some of the beauties of antiquated jurisprudence, at which we gaze and admire as the perfection of human reason. They may justly claim kindred with our system of imprisonment of the innocent. We wish not to question the purity of their origin, or disturb the harmony of the alliance. We are continually changing, modifying, repealing and enacting laws to meet temporary emergencies. The rapid march of improvement in our social and civil relations is constantly introducing new subjects for legislation. Our statute-book is full even to plethora with legislative patch-work. But we do not apply the knife and cautery to the parts most diseased. Like unskilful surgeons, we amputate where there is no disease, and leave the gangrene to rankle and fester in the body politic. We passively submit to a law, unjust, unequal, oppressive and inhuman, whose constitutionality has been questioned and denied by sound statesmen and learned jurists. Alarmed at the outcry against reform, we supinely hug our chains, without one well directed effort to redeem ourselves from the thralldom of this legalized slavery. If the modification or repeal of the law were a new and untried experiment, our timidity might perhaps be justly alarmed. We might with some show of excuse, be filled with gloomy forebodings of the imaginary consequences that would ensue an abandonment of the law. But the experiment has been tried. The result has been propitious. We have before us bright and illustrious examples. The system was abolished by the Napoleon code. That master-spirit of his age, who by an almost intuitive knowledge, could discern the causes which affect the prosperity or adversity of States—accounted his battles as nothing—his victories as nothing—the thrones he had crumbled as nothing—when, in the exultation of his pride, entrusting the glory of his name to impartial history, he exclaimed, "I shall go down to posterity with my code in my hand." Yet we lavish our Pharisaical panegyrics on the excellence of our own institutions; and like the subjects of the patriarchal despotism of China, dread any innovation, and continue a rigorous conformity to the ancient system.

A new kind of shaving soap, of good quality, may be obtained of the inventor, Samuel L. Creech, No. 5 Congress square. It is a good article for any man's face, whether he belong to the temperance society, or not.

"But the attempt on the grandest scale, to pervert the public moneys into a party fund, is the removal of the deposits—by which the balances of the public treasury are bestowed on certain party politicians, to be used for their own profit in consideration of their subservience and adherence."—Boston Atlas.

How far the public monies have been "perverted into a party fund," by the removal of the deposits, we leave the Nationals to decide, for they have almost the entire control of them, as will be seen by the character of the State Banks selected for their reception.

Bridgetown, Barbadoes, Jan. 6, 1834. Insurrection at Martinique.—By an arrival from Martinique, private letters have come to hand, which state an insurrection had taken place amongst the slaves in that colony, and that in a skirmish between them and the military, on the 24th ult. between 50 and 60 were killed, and 180 taken prisoners, with arms in their hands.

Yesterday morning, the Rosa, a Spanish schooner of 75 tons burden, came into this port, a prize to H. M. brig Despatch, having on board 202 African negroes, consisting of 116 males, and 176 females, between the ages of 10 and 18 years.

From Mexico.—Intelligence has been received at New Orleans from Very Cruz to the 27th, and from the city of Mexico to the 19th Dec. The details are not important. They are mainly confirmatory of the previous accounts of the success of the government party over the insurgents.

Suicide.—On Saturday evening, about 10 o'clock, the inhabitants of St. John's street, above Poplar lane, were startled at the sound of a gun. About midnight, a watchman discovered a man lying on the pavement, as he supposed, drunk. He called another watchman to aid him in taking the man to the watch house. On raising him, it was found that his head was literally blown to pieces. A double barrelled gun was found at his side, with one barrel charged. The deceased was Laurence Sutton, a native of Stuttgart, in Germany, about 29 years of age. He left Germany on account of domestic troubles, and having spent all of his money, he determined to destroy his life, and had provided himself with a poison in case the gun should have failed.—*U. A large Parlor Log which was cut and carted by Mr Peter Ladow, and sawed by Mr Richard Hankins at Lawrence's saw mill at Dividing Creek, made 2437 feet panel boards, 437 feet of scantling. It is supposed to have wasted by hewing 337 feet. The boards were sold for $52 per thousand, which amounts to $61—the produce of the whole log amounting to about $70.

Rahway, Feb. 4—Fire.—The dwelling house of Mr Wm Dunn, tailor, in Plainfield, was destroyed by fire on Sunday night last. A large quantity of cut out clothing was consumed. Building, &c. insured.

Accident.—Mr Samuel Anderson, an aged man, in the employ of Mr Smith Freeman, was crushed by the falling of a tree yesterday morning. No hopes are entertained of his recovery.—N. Y. paper.

An Allegory.—Mr Editor—I witnessed a scene a few days since, of which I shall endeavour to give you a description. I happened to be in the menagerie of wild beasts, at feeding time, and the keeper brought in a quarter of beef to distribute among them. On passing near the Lion's cage, he made a pass and seized the whole and drew it up to his bars and began to devour it. A BEAR in the next cage began to feed very quietly on the part that was exposed to his reach. The keeper not being able to extricate the whole, seized a large knife, and cut off slices and distributed round to the other beasts. Hereupon the Lion set up such a roar, that the other beasts became alarmed lest the Lion should burst his cage and turn over their cages, and make havoc among them; and some of them begged the keeper to let him have the whole, and they would go without their dinners; but the keeper did not incline to yield to their fears, and kept cutting off slices. There was immediately a terrible uproar. As the bear was very powerful and helped the lion to hold the beef, the lion was willing that Bruin should eat as much as he pleased; and Bruin having been kept rather short for some time, stuffed himself grandly; but still, the more timorous of the beasts were alarmed, and every time the lion roared, and shook their cages, which Bruin aided all in his power, they would send a petition, "without distinction of party," to the keeper to let them starve. At last Bruin raised himself upon his hind legs, shook his ears, stretched out his fore paws, rolled his eyes around, upon the keeper, his assistants, and the spectators, grinned horribly, and showed his large ivory, and looked unutterable things, and "in a mixed tone of anger and of sorrow," said, addressing the under keeper, "It was all the fault of the keeper." "He had caused all this uproar." "That he ought to have known, that the lion would growl horribly; that the dromedaries, and the goats would be frightened, and that the jackals and monkeys would make a chattering enough to bring on 'a great crisis,' as to the mode of taking their food;" and that as the lion now knew how good it was, to have as much as he could eat they must let him have the whole in future, and he would then quietly leave some garbage, which might be distributed among the rest. The lion greatly admired Bruin's wisdom, and agreed if he could carry this plan with the keeper, he might eat as much as he pleased off one end of the quarter. The timorous beasts all applauded Bruin's oratory, and greatly admired his grimaces and antics, being also somewhat in fear, that if he was not well fed, he might break out and give them a death hug, or rob them of even the garbage. But the keeper stood firm, having had a good deal of experience in managing these beasts. He told his assistants to keep cutting away, and finally the lion was left with nothing but the bone, which they left him to make the most of; and as soon as they had all finished their meal, they thought no more of the matter, and very quietly went to rest, except Bruin, who gave up a terrible growl once in a while; but as they soon perceived that the keeper was not to be frightened out of his course, and was able to keep both the Lion and Bruin in their cages; they became very well satisfied, with the keeper's management, and took very little notice of Bruin's growl, though they could not help admiring his antics.

Mr Greene.—Can you inform a correspondent what the Corporation of Harvard College have done in relation to the Degree which that august body conferred upon the President of the United States? It is said, that some of the managers in this business, do not like the degree of confidence which the President conferred upon them. It is rumored that, when the Degree of LL. D. was conferred upon the Emperor of Russia, there was some informality about the meeting, and that that subject is likewise to undergo an investigation. Can you give any information about the gold rings? Nick Jr.

We will endeavor to ascertain the fate of the rings, &c. and give our correspondent all necessary information.—Ed.

Caution to Hackmen.—A veteran hackman was brought before the Police Court, yesterday, and fined $2, and costs, for standing at the door of the Tremont Theatre, in the evening, and soliciting employment, without having obtained a license. He happened to "wake up the wrong passenger," for he offered his hack to no less a personage than a Deputy Marshall, whose especial duty it was to take cognizance of infraction of the hack law. He pleaded ignorance of the law, and was very much surprised at the proceeding.

The science of self-defence.—This manly accomplishment seems to have some votaries at least in the other sex. If we may judge from the fact, that two tolerably well dressed and good looking females from 18 to 20 years of age, were apprehended yesterday in the public street, while engaged in a regular set-to, having just then entered upon the fifth round, while the opportune arrival of some police officers fortunately interrupted. Who they are or what they are, both of them refused to disclose to the police magistrate, beyond the fact that the name of one was Adelaide, and the other Belinda. Both of them being strangers to the officers, and manifesting a determination not to reveal their cause of quarrel or place of residence, they were committed to prison for a breach of the public peace until some further information could be obtained in relation to them.—N. Y. Cour.

Romantic Case.—In the Exchequer Chamber, on Friday, Mr H. Twiss opened the case of Russell vs. Turley. He said that Mrs Russell, before her marriage with Mr Russell, lived in the family of Mr Burge, an eminent optician in Piccadilly, and on her marriage £1000 Navy 6 per cents. belonging to her was transferred to Mr Burge in trust for herself for life, and at her decease for the benefit of her daughter; the interest to be paid to the plaintiff for life. Mr Burge, the trustee, died in 1819, a short time after he had executed this deed. Mrs Burge came into possession of all his property, and the plaintiff, although her niece, could never obtain the deed from her, nor any acknowledgment that money was due to her, but £26 were doled out to her, expressly by way of favor. In 1823, Mrs Burge was married to Mr Turley, and in 1832 she died. The deed then in a most extraordinary manner made its appearance. An old shopman to Mr Burge, named Allen, produced the document, and related that the day after Mr Burge's death, he and Mrs Burge were in a room examining two chests, when Mrs Burge took the deed, which was in a box, and told him to burn it; adding, that she had sent the servant out, and that she had made a fire for roasting in the kitchen.—Allen then wrapped up the deed in some paper, and went into the kitchen, whither he was followed by Mrs Burge. Allen then threw the brown paper in which the deed had been enclosed into the fire, and secreted the deed itself. Mrs Burge then stirred the fire, and said, as it flamed up, "Now I am happy." The deed remained in the possession of Allen till the death of Mrs Burge, when he delivered it to Mrs Russell. Mr Treslove, for Mr Turley, said his client knew nothing of the circumstances which had been stated. He made very slight opposition to the reception of the deed. The hand-writing of Mr Burge and the genuineness of the deed having been proved, Lord Lyndhurst decreed for the plaintiff, and under the circumstances, with costs.

Anecdote of Louis the Eighteenth.—At the period of the Restoration, the Duc de —, one of the most confidential servants of Napoleon, became attached to the Royal Household. "Before I admit you into my secrets, my dear Duke," said the King, in honoring him with a first private audience at the Tuileries, "you must favor me with a few of yours in exchange. Pray how did you manage to obtain such correct intelligence of my proceedings during my sojourn at Milan and Verona? Who was the fellow that so far violated his trust as to afford to the Emperor intelligence of all that was passing in my household?" "The Verona and Milan affairs, Sire, were before my time," replied the Duke: "but at Hartwell, I am under the necessity of avowing that we obtained all our information through the treachery of the Duc D'Aumont." "Not a bit!" cried his Majesty, laughing heartily. "D'Aumont and I were both very poor. He received £400 per annum out of the £2,000 which you used to forward to him so regularly, as the price of the secret information with which we favored you in return, but the balance was paid over to me!" The confusion of the new minister may be readily conceived.

Intervention of Priests in Marriages.—It was not until the Council of Trent (1429) that the intervention of a priest, or other ecclesiastical functionary, was deemed in Europe indispensable to a marriage. It was then ascertained that the existence of the marriage contract as a mere civil engagement, unalloyed by any spiritual sanction, tended much to the formation of clandestine connexions, and their concomitant evils. The celebrated decree passed in that session interdicted any marriage otherwise than in the presence of a priest, and at least two witnesses. But in England, previous to 1754, the common law continued to regulate the law of marriage, the authority of the Council of Trent not having been acknowledged in this country; and whilst, in virtue of domestic institutions, a form was enjoined for the most solemn celebration of matrimony, and persons departing from these regulations were liable to ecclesiastical censure, still other more private modes of contracting a marriage were tolerated and acknowledged by law.

POSTSCRIPT.

From the Journal of Commerce, of 6th inst.

LATEST FROM CANTON.

We are indebted to a commercial house for a Canton Register of July 15th and a Price Current of the 22d, received by the Dorothea from Manila.

The "Celestial Empire" is not without its troubles—among which are insurrections, floods, and famine. Yet all these evils are not sufficient to cure the cupidity of the custom house officers. Some time in the month of June an order was issued by the Governor of Canton, prohibiting the exaction of import duties from vessels importing only rice; but notwithstanding this, the custom house officers and others, at Whampoa, continued to exact them as if no such order had been issued.

The President and Select Committee of the East India Company have found it necessary to repeal the licence under which the Opium-receiving-ship Hercules was permitted to resort to China and to declare any other licence which might have been subsequently granted by the Supreme Government, or by any of the Presidencies of India, revoked.

The old Minister of State, Na-yen-ching, who had served in high offices under three successive Emperors, has lately deceased.

The Pekin Gazette announces that another son has been born to the Emperor, and is to be named Yih-hin, i. e. "Great-and-continued-joy."

The new Governor of Macao, Capt. Bernardo Jose de Souza Soares Andria, arrived from Goa on the 9th inst. He is said to be a liberal minded man; and for the sake of the place, which has been ruined by folly and arbitrary enactments, we hope it may be so.

Canton, July 15.—Floods.—The regular routine of business in Canton has been lately broken in upon by the occurrence of floods in the Canton river, produced by heavy rains in the northern and north western provinces.—The low country has been inundated, and great loss of life and property ensued.

Canton Price Current, July 22, 1833.—Cotton.—There has been little doing in the Cotton market.

Opium.—In consequence of the intelligence received from Bombay by the recent arrivals, the Opium market experienced some activity to day, and prices of Malwa rose gradually from $640 to $650, and $680 to $694, at which rates some small parcels changed hands.

Teas.—We no longer quote prices, as the remaining stock is of a very miscellaneous nature, and the cost would depend entirely on the necessities of the seller, and the eagerness of the buyer. In other articles our market has varied but slightly since our last.

From the Baltimore American.

Very late from Buenos Ayres.—We have received the "Packet" of the 7th December. The accounts from Chili, over land, are to the 3d November, tranquility prevailed in that republic. In Peru, a "montoner" warfare existed against the government in the various departments and it had extended even to the gates of Lima.

We do not find any intelligence of material interests in the papers. The provinces of Santa Fe and Codova, have addressed communications to that of Buenos Ayres, congratulating the latter on the election of Viamont as Governor.

The American brig Hyperion, Jenny, of Baltimore was driven on shore at Colonia, at two o'clock on the morning of the 10th Dec., in a heavy gale in which she parted both cables, and went on the sand beach in front of the Saladero de Botot. Hopes were entertained that she would be got off.

Price Currents at Buenos Ayres, Dec. 14.—Doubloons, Spanish, 123 dollars each; Spanish Dollars, 7 1/2 dollars each; Hides, Ox, best, 30a35 per pesada; do country, 27a28 do; do weighing 23a24 lbs. 25a28; do salted 20a23 per pesada; do horse 11a12 each; Hair long 29a30 arroba; Jerked beef 14a15 qd; Flour 65 a70 per bbl.

CONGRESS.

Monday, Feb. 3.—In the Senate, Mr Shepley presented certain resolutions of the Legislature of the State of Maine, expressing the opinion of that Legislature in relation to the Bank of the United States—to the cause of the distress upon the commercial community, and to the removal of the public deposits; and instructing her Senators to oppose a restoration of the deposits, and a renewal of the charter of the Bank, which, after some remarks by Mr Shepley, and Mr Sprague, were read and referred to the committee of Finance, and ordered to be printed.

Mr Wilkins presented two or three memorials from Pittsburg, sustaining the Secretary of the Treasury upon the removal of the deposits, which were referred to the committee on Finance, and ordered to be printed.

The resolutions of Mr Poindeux submitted on Friday, were then taken up, and after debate, laid upon the table.

The Special Order having been taken up—Mr Frelinghuysen took the floor and addressed the Chair in opposition to the reasons of the Secretary of the Treasury for removing the deposits, until 3 o'clock, when he gave way to a motion by Mr Wilkins, that the Senate adjourn, which prevailed.

In the House, the resolutions of the Legislature of Maine upon the deposit question, were presented, read, and after debate, ordered to be printed and laid on the table. Mr Mann of N. Y., presented the joint resolutions of the Legislature of New York, approving the removal of the deposits, and instructing her Senators and requesting her Representatives to oppose the re-charter of the Bank of the United States. After a spirited debate, the question on referring the memorial to the committee of Ways and Means, was put, and decided in the affirmative, 113 to 97. So the memorial was referred to the committee of Ways and Means, and the House, on motion at 6 o'clock adjourned.

Supreme Court.—We learn with pleasure that Thomas Sergeant, Esq. formerly Post Master of this city, and a lawyer of distinction and ability, has been appointed Associate Judge of the Supreme court of Pa. in place of Judge Ross, dec.—Phil. Inquirer.

The public are cautioned against receiving any notes of the Phoenix Bank, N. Y. of the denomination of $1000, the sum of $5000 having been fraudulently obtained from said Bank yesterday.

The draft for the amount had the forged endorsement of a house in this city—it was handed in for payment by a porter in Wall street, who received the money, and put it into the hands of the person who had employed him.—N. Y. Gaz.

NOTICE—PRO BONO PUBLICO.

The celebrated KENSET PLASTER, whose sanatory properties in alleviating or removing pain or weakness in the breast, side, back, or limbs, and for rheumatism, liver complaint and dyspepsia, have been amply tested by multitudes in the wide spread population of our western continent, and also in the Spanish, Danish, and British West India Islands, is now presented for sale by the subscriber.

The above Plaster is the invention of an eminent surgeon, and from the numerous instances of its salutary effects in the aforementioned distressing complaints, the proprietor can recommend it with the most confident assurance. They feel pleasure in stating, without fear of contradiction, that out of the extensive sales both in the Islands and throughout the United States, not one plaster in fifty has been returned—they therefore trust that this fact will afford the strongest possible evidence of their superior efficiency.

Boston, at 84 Washington st. 3m feb 8

LARGE DISCOUNTS FOR CASH.

The subscribers, believing the present system of credit injurious to both the buyer and seller, and wishing to change the same so far as practicable, have determined to commence a Cash Business, and will offer this date discount from their former prices 8 per cent for cash—thereby giving those who are in the habit of cashing their bills, some real advantage, and also holds out to others an inducement to adopt the same course.
It is the frequent complaint of those who settle their bills promptly, that they "pay for others' delinquencies." As this system will obviate all such causes of complaint, they trust it will meet the approbation of their customers, and all those who may hereafter become such. GOODRICH & HUNTINGTON, Mer-
